Ploughing through the contents of your inbox you realise that assembly starts in 20 minutes and your preparation time has been gobbled up by the more immediate needs of school management. The last thing you feel ready to do is provide a time of collective worship and reflection for 200 teenagers!

Meanwhile, groups of students are gathering, chatting or browsing through magazines and MP3 players. Their heads are full of pop music, films and last night's TV. The last thing on their minds is the imminent opportunity to explore their own beliefs while reflecting on spiritual and moral issues.

If only there was a way to bridge the gap between the world of young people and the world of spiritual reflection – and to fit all that into the busy life of an overworked teacher. Well now there is: Assemblies Online.

Assembliesonline.com

Written by experienced teachers and youth workers, the website provides ready made assemblies that use the latest films, music and TV to draw out spiritual and moral themes, thus enabling young people to reflect on their own personal journey. The aim of the material is to make assemblies engaging and enjoyable for students and easy for teachers to prepare – whether you are able to devote plenty of time to preparation or forced to throw something together at the last moment.

Comprehensive: Broad themes and detailed subjects provide a framework for a complete syllabus of assemblies. Most of our assemblies also include downloadable media resources.

Flexible: Our assemblies can be tailored for whole school assemblies, smaller group reflections and for a range of ages across the Secondary spectrum.

Always up to date: New assemblies added every month, using the latest films, pop songs and whatever else it takes to engage your students.

Easy to use: Point, click and print your tailor-made assembly with as much – or little – detail as you choose.
